

-- ALLEN --

The family groups represented in this collection may not be complete, because information was entered bit by bit as I found it or happened upon it; I have not done any systematic research on these families. Because they do not compose whole family genealogies, these listings are arranged differently from most genealogical records or histories. Each listing is a family group, and is arranged and filed alphabetically under the name of the head of the family.

Names are generally in alphabetical order (disregarding spelling variations and middle names), then in approx. chronological order. The first sorting is by surname (mixing together any and all spelling variations), then by given name, then by approximate birthdate (when known) in approximate chronological order. For easier reference, surnames in headings are grouped together under the most common spelling usage that evolved in this geographical location, regardless of individualistic spellings in the records themselves. Cross references are used in most cases where surname spellings substantially vary.

Within the quoted records, the individual spellings have been (mostly) retained because they sometimes provide clues (although in general—but with exceptions—they seem to largely reflect the record keeper's particular orthography and not always, at this early period, any special family preference). Those interested can see the variety and evolvement of a particular name's spelling and the interesting and sometimes amusing attempts at phonetic reproduction. Keep in mind that before names and spellings were standardized, records reflected the individualistic whim of the particular recorder (often two different spellings of the same name within the same document). In addition, all records were handwritten, and sometimes deciphering a handwritten name in early records can be quite challenging! So expect to search under all possibilities of spelling (for both surnames and given names).

Given names are grouped together without regard for middle initials or middle names. Because middle names and/or initials are sometimes used, sometimes not used in various records, it seemed simplest to arrange entries as if the middle names or initials did not exist. Usually all variations of a given name are grouped together as though spelled one way: Jan, Johannes, John, etc. are all grouped as one (but also look under the other forms).

Sources and references are included with each "family" grouping, but may or may not include sources that are cited (or are obvious, such as baptismal records, etc.) within the narrative or listing itself.

As with any compiled genealogical record, researchers should regard this information as leads and clues, and should verify all data with independent research.

I welcome, and would be grateful for, any additions or corrections, especially with source citations.

d. 1862

Joseph Warner Allen, surveyor of the route of the Paterson & Ramapo Railroad through Allendale, stayed with the family of John G. Ackerman on Franklin Turnpike (in what became Allendale, Bergen Co., NJ) about 1846, while surveying in this area. When the station was established, the stop was named "Allendale" in his honor.

He was chief engineer of the Hoboken Land and Improvement Co., the Dundee Water Power and Land Co., and various railroad enterprises.

He was deputy quartermaster-general of New Jersey, and organized and equipped the first eight regiments of three years' volunteers for the Civil War. He was a colonel of the 9th New Jersey volunteers, and joined the Burnside expedition in North Carolina. He drowned off Cape Hatteras in 1862.

a practical plan for standard time (to standardize railroad schedules), adopted in 1883; he was known as the "Father of Standard Time." He had four children: Yorke Allen, Frederick Warner Allen, Eugene Yorke Allen, and John Sinnickson Allen.

Note: Time standardization did not arise from any government action, but was a private initiative. There were at least three parts to this initiative. One was the emergence of an extensive network of telegraph lines across the United States, often, but not solely, in conjunction with railway lines. The second took place at the nation's observatories. Astronomers used an accurate measure of time in their work. By stringing a telegraph line from their observatory to the local railway station, observatory astronomers could sell accurate time. So, why did the railway companies want standardized time? Railways ran through all sorts of local times. These time zones were much, much smaller than those we have today. Travelling through New Jersey, you might encounter dozens. Local time, literally, the time in that town, ruled. But railways needed some way of knowing, when the train left Camden, what time it would be in Perth Amboy. So, they invented a form of standardized time called railroad time. Long before 1883, astronomers and railway people sought to standardize time. It was THEIR initiative, not that of the government, that brought about standard time. Also, when government did participate (such as in the case of the European states), they were reacting to pressure from rail and astronomy interests. --- Information November 1997 from Andrew J.
